

AUF WIEDERSEHEN KOHLE, GOODBYE CARBON

Posted on 16/08/2015 by Naider

The good news comes to us, in this case, from Germany. The German country has decided to close all power plants that operate under the power of coal, to be more exact, lignite, a kind of coal.

The action falls within the plan of the German government that has promised to reduce CO₂ emissions by up to 20% by 2010 compared to 1990 levels, as reported by
