

CLIMATE CHANGE EATS OUR MINDS

Posted on 15/10/2015 by Naider

Neither the crisis, nor terrorism, nor football, the greatest global concern is climate change; That's at least what emerges from the latest Pew Research Center survey; In 19 of the 40 countries consulted, the environment led the list of concerns, although in almost all of them the actors present were almost identical, only their order varied.

Analyzing the data, Latin America was the continent with the greatest "environmental awareness" while in the countries with the greatest geographical proximity to Eastern Europe, they felt greater concern about the problems derived from terrorism, logically due to the proximity that this implies with the conflicts present in Syria.

Especially striking is the fact that in 7 out of 9 countries in Africa, climate change ranks between first and third place. As for Asia, there is quite a difference of opinion depending on the region, while in North America ISIS appears as a reference on the lists.

There are no comments yet.