In 2015, more than 150 heads of state and government met at the historic Sustainable Development Summit in New York to create the Agenda 2030 of the United Nations. This Agenda contains 17 Sustainable Development Goals \(SDGs\) of universal application that, from on January 1, 2016, lead countries' efforts to achieve a more sustainable society by the year 2030. Inheritors of the Goals of Development Goal \(MDG\), the SDGs seek to expand the successes achieved with the latter and achieve those goals that were not achieved.
