on area of Spanish companies are giving way to greener pastures. This is the conclusion drawn from a report by Claranet, a leading innovation and development company.

This study highlights that the Spanish are the European companies that invest the most time in this section: around 12% compared to the 9% average of European companies. On the other hand, it also underlines that one of the reasons that has contributed to this is the little investment made in recent years, when the crisis and the cuts hit with greater intensity. Therefore, the Spanish potential is even greater than what is appreciated today.

A "green outbreak" without a doubt positive that we hope will last and infect other sectors of the country.
