JAPAN CHOOSES ENERGY

Posted on 06/08/2015 by Manu Fernandez

There is no evil that does not come for good, the economic crisis has devastated everything that was ahead...both good and bad. Sports such as golf have seen their demand quotas significantly reduced, which has caused the closure of many of these facilities, as we can find out through diaryecology.

On a positive note, it should be added that energy companies, in their desire to convert to ecological energy, have bought these fields to collect solar energy, taking advantage of the fact that they are usually open spaces with a large amount of light.

Undoubtedly, something positive to scratch from what the crisis is leaving us.

There are no comments yet.