Obama promete 1.000 millones de dólares para emprendedores de startups en todo el mundo

Startup entrepreneurs are in luck, and it is that nothing more and nothing less than the president of the United States, Barack Obama, has announced an investment of 1,000 million dollars for those who dare to bring one of them to the market, with special attention to young people and women, according to information from allstartups.

This new model could be defined as a newly created company that presents great possibilities for growth and, at times, a scalable business model.

Although the term startup can refer to companies in any field, it is usually used for those that have a strong technological component and that are related to the world of the Internet.

From naider we hope that these types of initiatives do not come in drops and that, if possible, they do not come only from foreign countries and leaders.
