

THE CRISIS MAKES GDP PER CAPITA FALL BY 1,000 EUROS

Posted on 18/04/2016 by Naider

The per capita GDP of Spain has decreased by 984 euros between 2008 and 2015, according to the newspaper Expansion based on INE data. The figure, which, as it is an average, does not reflect the inequality between different incomes and their evolution, is equivalent to 1.5 times the established minimum wage. In percentage terms, it represents a 4.1% decrease compared to the 24,274 euros of income per inhabitant in 2008 - in 2015 the income per inhabitant was €23,290 -.

Although no community is free of red numbers, the Basque Country is among the seven communities where income has fallen less than the average (€784), in absolute terms. In percentage terms, the smallest drop corresponds to the Community of Madrid (-€1.06), followed by La Rioja (-1.84%), Castilla y León (-2.23%), Catalonia (-2.36 %), and Euskadi (-2.51%). On the opposite side, Cantabria (-8.77%), Asturias (-7.44%), Andalucía (-7.31%), Murcia (-7.00%) and Castilla-La Mancha (6.82%) stand out.).

There are no comments yet.