

THE DECISION TO LEAVE A MILLION DOLLARS ON THE TABLE

Posted on 29/07/2011 by Naider

In relation to start-ups we have everything to learn from Americans, and especially from the San Francisco area. In the video hosted at the following link you can listen to a very interesting interview that Paul Hontz from The Startup Foundry makes Darshan Shankar (co-founder of Flotype).

In the interview, the entrepreneur explains why he rejected a million dollar investment in his start-up and decided to focus on another idea.

<http://thestartupfoundry.com/2011/06/23/leaving-a-million-bucks-on-the-table-why-flotype-pivoted-in-y-combinator/>

As you will see in the video, the entrepreneur talks about his lack of motivation and passion for the business idea. When you are an entrepreneur and someone invests a million dollars in your idea, you must undoubtedly be very convinced that you are going to put all the meat on the grill. The exercise of analysis and self-criticism by these entrepreneurs is undoubtedly admirable.

There are no comments yet.