

THE FIRE OF INDIFFERENCE

Posted on 26/10/2015 by Naider

Indonesia is experiencing a drama and while the world turns its back on it, from naider we join the cry and we echo the words of Karmele LLano Sanchez, naider award winner, in her complaint about the situation facing the country Asian. The serious fires that ravage Indonesia, caused to produce palm oil, have resulted in a dense smoke that is causing serious damage, both environmental, economic and related to the health of thousands and thousands of Indonesians.

Unfortunately, new fires do not stop appearing, aggravating the current situation and the outlook does not seem too encouraging, in the words of the Malaysian environment minister "Unless it rains, there is no way that human action can extinguish them" to In turn, the politician has estimated that these could last until the months of December or January.

The situation is bordering on such seriousness that the country runs the risk of suddenly becoming the third country in the world that will produce the most greenhouse gases.
