SALE EL SOL EN EUSKADI

Sectores como el energético, ingeniero y financiero empiezan a dar signos de una esperanzadora recuperación económica

As if it were a diesel car, the Basque economy is finding it difficult to start up and pick up speed, even so, it seems that those famous green shoots are beginning to emerge and, even if clearly, to be seen. To the rhythm of metaphors, diesel being the fuel, innovation is presented as the engine and sectors such as energy, telecommunications and finance the seeds of the long-awaited shoots, as we can see through a study published in expansion.

The importance of the industry and the notorious drop in international demand in this sector left the Basque business network in serious trouble, fortunately, data such as the increase in demand for steel in Europe or the increase in investment in R&D&i in engineering sectors, together with the consolidation of the energy sector, suggest that the situation is gradually moving towards a solid and hopeful recovery.
