

VERDEPOLIS

Posted on 14/07/2015 by Naider

Industrialization, globalization and pollution have made gray the color we associate with cities, fortunately we see how little by little green is taking over our parks and cities, creating, day by day, cleaner and healthier cities. .

Even so, we still have a long way to go, which is why there are not a few who seeing or smelling (pollution is what it has) this problem have decided to move away from the big cities, creating their own environmentally friendly centers and with themselves. A new term called "ecovillage" presented to us by the web ecoportal. These rural centers are communities whose objective is to be socially, ecologically and economically sustainable.

Revolutionary ideas with multiple challenges, all in pursuit of a more sustainable society.

There are no comments yet.