o, the North American company has announced the biggest drop in sales in the last four years for the third quarter of 2015, dropping as much as 8%, which implies leaving its sales volume in the 1,000 million dollars.

In addition, the giant has also announced that sales for this last quarter of the year will be less than the estimate made at the time, remaining between 1,160 and 1,200 million dollars.

Even so, Yahoo's sorrows do not end here since we must add another 16% decline in its shares this year due to the falls in its net profits that have not managed to exceed the 76 barrier. million dollars.
