The The current president of Liberia, Ellen Johnson-Sirleaf, the Liberian activist Leymah Gbowee, and the Yemeni opposition Tawakkul Karman share a seamless recognition: the Nobel Peace Prize.

Today they represent the role, almost always forgotten or hidden, that women have played throughout history in all the episodes of national and social liberation on the five continents.

As almost always happens, the woman is not usually distinguished or remembered. Today the trend is broken and it is triple. Peace, Harmony and Coexistence are words that are written in feminine.

Let the world know!
